"The question to determine here," concluded Mr. Crane, "is whether we shall let them continue to debauch the city and to betray us—whether we shall let Fat Moran revel in money wrung from the taxpayers of Second South street."

He advocated legal resistance and, in reply to a question from Dr. J. M. Dart, said the expense of litigation would be tween $400 and $500.

W. J. Halloran spoke for the opposition. He challenged a statement made by Mr. Crane that 90 per cent of the interested property owners favor macadam. He predicted that macadam, if adopted, would prove a failure, and said it would cost heavily to keep it 'r. repair, whereas, the contractor would be under bond to keep asphalt paving in repair for ten years. He said that macadamized streets were a failure in Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

Mr. Halloran admitted that he had cir.

failure in Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

Mr. Halloran admitted that he had circulated the original asphalt petition, and defended the regularity and legality of the city council's action. He declared that it was too late to change and do anything this year, and predicted that no more street paving would be done in Salt Lake for several years, after the present contracts are completed.

Mr. Crane retorted that macadamized roads had been a success almost from the foundation of the world, and cited the old roads of Rome, as well as macadamized roads of Rome, as well as macadamized streets in American cities. Isidore Morris sai! nobody but Mr. Halloran had ever agitated paving. He was opposed to paving of any kind on the street. Mrs. E. Kimball said she had signed the asphait petition, but had become converted to macadam.

One for Martin Mulvey.

Henry Cohn charged Councilman M. E. Mulvey with promising that he and his colleagues from the Fifth ward, Black and Davis, would call a meeting of interested property owners and ascertain their wishes before the contract was let. That romise, he declared, Mr. Mulvey had broken. He roasted the council.

"The members of the council don't care mething for the members of the council don't care. "The members of 'he council don't care anything for the public," he declared. "After they are elected they think they are our bosses. You should go down and see how your servants, the councilmen, do business. There is hardly a man among them who ever earned a dollar except in the sweat of somebody's else brow. In Los Angeles, when the council was going to do something the taxpayers did not want, the taxpayers went down to the council meeting with ropes, and they didn't do it. It mightn't be a bad idea to try that here."

the council meeting with ropes, and they didn't do it. It mightn't be a bad idea to try that here."

A. T. Moon favored asphalt paving and Dr. A. V. Silver spoke for macadam, particularly on-residence strects. Isidore Morris, after declaring that a bitumin makeshift, not good asphalt, was all that ever had been used in Salt Lake paving, introduced his resolution calling on Mulvey, Davis and Black to resign.

A. V. Taylor advised against adopting the resolution, as did W. M. McCrea Mr. Metrea said, however, that Mr. Halloran cid not have the nerve to say that asphalt paving was a success in Salt Lake. He resented what he termed was "the attempt of a real estate agent (meaning Mr. Halloran) to dictate to the people of a whole street what they should do." He was applauded, after which Mr. Morris' resolution was withdrawn. Mrs. Paul. a woman property owner, objected to criticism of public officials.

"Let's talk ousness," she said. "I'd rather attend a woman's meeting than one of your men's meetings."

Vote for Assessment.

After a few more speeches pro and con he 5-cent assessment was agreed upon, he only votes cast against it being those f Mr. Halloran, Mr. Moon and Samuel Weitz.

The tax levied for the asphalt paving is Sil a front foot on the property between Third and Sixth East streets, and $3.75 a front foot between Sixth and Tenth East streets. The cost of macadam is estimated at between $4 and $5 a front foot.

Will Cost County Pretty Penny to Punish Labor Rioters of Garfield.

It will cost Salt Lake county a pretty penny to try the Greek laborers who are accused of riot at Garfield recently. There are twenty-nine of them. Twenty of them are charged with the offense of "rout," which is a misdemeanor and consists of inciting riot and trouble. Justices of the peace have original jurisdiction in these cases, but all of the accused will demand separate trials.

tion in these cases, but all of the accused will demand separate trials.

Nine of the men are accused of actually engaging in a riot. These men will be given separate preliminary examinations in the lower court and separate trials in the district court, if they demand them, which, so far as the lower court is concerned, they have demanded.

Two of the Greeks have been bound over by Justice Dana T. Smith. The other seven took their cases before City Judge J. J. Whitaker yesterday on a change of venue, and J. Salamas was held to answer to the district court in $2.500 bonds. The other six cases will be disposed of as rapidly as possible.

UTTER NOW A "D. D." Rev. David Utter, pastor of the Unitarian church in Denver, who for some time presided over the church in this city, has had the honorary degree of doctor of divinity conferred on him by Howard university. Dr. Utter's eldest son, Robert H. Utter, at the same time received the degree of doctor of philosophy in English.
